Makor Hayyim,
Source of Life,

Nourish with Your light the seeds of memory
Germinating inside
Of us
Of me

Help them stretch forth
And tear the earth away
Grasping toward the sky
Craving the warmth, the day

For memories thrive with care
Thirst for familiar air
Without, they collapse
Lapse

When blossomed
Spilling, overflowing, lush, awesome
Cradled in worn hands
Each breath sweet, each breath demands

"With you, with you"
The memories call
"With us, with us"
We petition for all

LILIES

by Aaron Frankel

Trying to maneuver my bicycle between the tiger lilies and the stargazer lilies at 6:30 in the morning, I had a choice. Or I would have had a choice had I been paying attention.

After weeks of confusion, when what appeared to be streaks of fresh paint kept randomly appearing on various parts of my shirts every day or two with no apparent source, I had an epiphany. Okay, maybe it wasn't much of an epiphany. But still. Every discovery has value, even ones that do not rise to the level of Newton.

We had not painted anything outdoors on our property in at least a year. Had I gone anywhere else with fresh paint? Nothing made sense. But one morning, when I brushed against the shoulder-high tiger lilies in the backyard, I immediately noticed a streak of paint on my shirt's shoulder. Could there be a connection, I wondered?

A closer inspection confirmed this. Pollen. Tiger lilies apparently have a luxurious and profuse dark pollen that embeds itself aggressively into anything it touches or that rubs against it in its quest for biological, botanical survival.

A moderately quick learner, I began avoiding the tiger lilies to keep the pollen off my shirts.

The passage into the backyard from the alley is narrow, though, framed by tiger lilies on one side and lovely purple stargazer lilies on the other. The tiger lilies are robust and extensive. They grow fast, and spread, and linger. Deep orange with dark spots or marks, like a tiger, they curve upward like claws. The stunning stargazer lilies, however, are short-lived and more fragile. They bloom from tall plant stalks after a slow and teasing gestation, appearing first as closed buds, like a cross between a sheathed corn cob and a carrot, and then suddenly opening wide, very much a purple star, perfect for appreciating. How long do they last? A couple of weeks. Three at most, before they fall off, their beauty arresting but fleeting.

When entering through the gate from the alley with my bicycle, it is nearly impossible to avoid rubbing against the tiger lilies without pushing aside and potentially damaging the lovely stargazer lilies. If I am careful and slow and gently grasp the stalk of the stargazer to move it aside, then I can create sufficient space to pass without damage to my shirt or the lily. But if I am not paying attention, if I am distracted, thinking of something essential or something irrelevant, or simply not thinking at all, just drifting without seeing, I will do damage.

To my shirt. Or to the lily.

So that was the choice that morning at 6:30. To pay attention and to maneuver thoughtfully. Or to be distracted and move bluntly, without star gazing, without appreciating the lilies, and risk doing damage, shortening the life of the stargazer lilies or the cleanliness of the shirt.

The choice turned out to be one of distraction. Or maybe distraction is the absence of choice. I knocked off two lily buds that morning, two buds that would not open as stargazer lilies. My shirt survived unscathed. Of course, I had just ridden fast for five miles. The shirt would need to be washed anyway.

That evening, I attended a shiva for a close friend of my parents, who had just passed away after a full and vibrant life, one of moving both thoughtfully and bluntly, of nurturing others and facilitating growth, and occasionally knocking off some lilies in the process. After the ma'ariv service, we all came together in a circle to share memories. A number of guests recounted moments of meaning and unique interactions. Many reflected on his unrelenting passion and exuberance, how he moved forward thoughtfully yet without much hesitation, all signs of a life rich with meaning and both generating and appreciating growth and beauty. Once the tales had run their course for the evening, his widow thanked everyone for coming. She said this: Don't hesitate. If there is something you want to do, something you dream about, make it happen. Don't waste time. Live life to the fullest.

And I thought of our lilies. Of that balance, of moving forward without hesitation, fresh from the bicycle ride, lost in thought yet aware of the air, or of taking a moment to stop, and recognize the lilies, and gently, when necessary, with love and care, move one or two softly aside, so both the lily and shirt remain solid.

How without both possibilities, without blunt, vibrant movement and cautious, conscious manipulation, something is lost.

This was it then.

We lost a couple of lilies on some days. I had to wash a few shirts but would have done so anyway. And on other days, there were no casualties at all, since I had been paying more attention.

But either way, there were a couple of weeks of delightful bike rides. And the lilies, for as long as they lasted, were lovely regardless.

My Mother

A devoted mother, grandmother, sister and friend. Mom faced life with inner strength, integrity, contentment, and humor. She dreamed of going to college and fulfilled her dream. She dreamed of once again being with our dad and now she has fulfilled that dream as well. She is missed by all who knew her.

Making the Best of a Difficult Year or What I Learned from the Pandemic

Ellen Barron Feldman

The world as we knew it shut down 18 months ago. We were stuck inside with our loved ones afraid to be with people, go to work outside our homes, hug those we loved most and terrified of a virus we knew very little about. I saw only my husband, our daughters and their husbands, and took chilly walks with my best friend who also lost her mother early in the pandemic. My mother died April 29, 2020. Thankfully, my friend and I had each other to commiserate. I was not able to see my sister for 17 months as she lives across the country, and she was not able to come in for mom's funeral. What have I learned and what have I done differently?

Being at Shalom Memorial Park for my mother's funeral with my daughters and their husbands, my husband and Rabbi Crane wearing an N95 mask was clearly not the way I had envisioned burying my mom. After living with Alzheimer's for five years, visiting her multiple times per week and hoping for some sign of recognition, I had lost her already. This was a new grief worse than I imagined, especially since her assisted living facility shut down weeks before the Governor shut down Illinois. Shiva by zoom for an extrovert like me was brutal.

I have found inspiration thinking about the lessons and positivity I learned from my parents. My dad, who died in June 2016, was always a glass half-full person. Education and family were the most important to him. I know as Jews that we are to find the positive wherever we can. I have enjoyed more quiet time, reading books and doing a new needlepoint of a hamsa. We had our daughters and their husbands over for dinner more often. Now that we have started to return to some sense of normalcy, I am appreciating my closest friends in outdoor settings.

I continue to be proud of my work mediating pre-decree and post-decree divorces by zoom. I have always told my Jewish colleagues and friends that I am making the world a better place, one mitzvah at a time. Mostly, I have learned to appreciate my family even more than I thought possible and take pleasure in every walk outside and every quiet moment alone. Sadly, I learned to live without both of my parents. I am proud of our daughters and the Jewish values my husband and I have instilled in them. They are both making the world a better place, one as a child psychologist and the other as a special ed teacher. I hope we can all remember what we learned and become stronger.

Holocaust By Barbara Sonek

We played, we laughed

We were loved

We were ripped from the arms of our parents and thrown into the fire.

We had a future. we were going to be lawyers, rabbis, wives, teachers, mothers.

We had dreams, then we had no hope.

We were taken away in the dead of the night like cattle in cars, no air to breathe smothering, crying , starving, dying. Separated from the world to be no more.

From the ashes, hear our pleas. This atrocity to mankind can not happen again.

In memory of a couple who lost their lives to Covid
This is on a plaque in Jewett Park in Deerfield -

"YOUR LIVES WERE A BLESSING,
YOUR MEMORY A TREASURE,
YOU ARE MISSED BEYOND WORDS AND LOVED BEYOND MEASURE"

When you come home after four weeks of camp, stop first at your great grandmother's house. Do not go to the movies. Do not go to a restaurant. Go to her small apartment.

Run up the ramp. Dance in the courtyard, and wait for your mom to open the door.

Smell the scent of old lady perfume and moth balls.

Press the button with excitement and step into the cramped elevator.

Skip out of the elevator and knock strongly on her door with the welcome sign just for you.

Hope that she is home. Hope that she is feeling okay.

Listen to the caregiver's feet come close to the door and open it.

Take your shoes off and walk into the television room.

Realize that you get to hold her hand again.

Feel the warmth in the eighty degree apartment.

Watch her sit in her plush brown recliner chair, holding the remote in one hand and your hand in the other.

Smell the fresh baked lemon cake in the oven.

Hear the caregiver ask your great grandmother if she wants a cup of hot tea.

Wonder if your great grandmother will ever answer.

Place the warm cup of tea in your great grandmother's hands and try feeding it to her.

Realize that the television is playing, but she is facing you.

Grip her cold, fragile hand tightly.

Watch her fall asleep comfortably in her designated chair that you are not allowed to sit in.

See her breathe; listen to her inhale.

Hold her hand tighter and hope that you will hold her hand again.

Know that you are blessed and know that she loves you, even if she can not talk to you.

Know that she loves you.

Kiss and give her hand a squeeze.

Exit the room holding your mom's hand saying, "Ich Liebe Dich", I love you Walk to the car slowly, wanting to walk back.

Watch television with your siblings as your parents go to the hospital to visit your great grandmother.

Stay calm. Hope they will be back soon.

Listen to your Ima and Abba pull into the garage. Hear the garage close.

Tell your brother to open the door and see your parents' distraught faces.

Hear them call a family meeting.
Listen to your parents say that your great grandmother has died.
Feel angry.
Feel upset.
Remember her sweet face and delicate body.
Embrace your mom, with tears streaming down your face.
Hug each other until you are in a pool of tears.
Feel an abundance of anger. Want to throw rocks at the walls.
Wonder why G-d would take your precious great grandmother away from you.
Decide that you will take this fury and speak at her funeral.
Decide what to say. Write all of your thoughts on paper. Practice and make sure to include your favorite memories. Give the speech to your parents to check. See smiles appear.
Sit in the front row of her funeral.
Smell the cold air.
Watch people start to file in, and feel proud that you were her great granddaughter.
Hear the rabbi blurt into the microphone and begin to speak.
Look at your dad sitting next to you. Look at the casket sitting in front of you. Sob.
Try not to ruin your blush, because you will be speaking next.
Breathe and know that she would be proud of you.
Take a sip of water.
Waste about twenty tissues and continue to cry.
Stand up and speak on behalf of the great grandchildren.
Feel her presence.
Stand confidently.
Be yourself.
“This is for you, Savta.”
Do not shed a tear during your speech. Sit down.
The speech is over.

Try to step in her apartment, but feel an invisible force stopping you
Go outside into the courtyard. Do not dance. Do not skip. Walk slowly down the ramp, and sit by the pool and begin to cry.
This time you want to go home. You don't want to step into the apartment.
There is no one to visit.

Remember me

Though I have to say goodbye

Remember me

Don't let it make you cry

For even if I'm far away

I hold you in my heart

I sing a secret song to you

Each night we are apart

Remember me

Though I have to travel far

Remember me

Each time you hear a sad guitar

Know that I'm with you

The only way that I can be

Until you're in my arms again
