A PUBLICATION OF BETH HILLEL BNAI EMUNAH

As we look toward the holiday of Passover, we call to memory the incredible and ever-relevant story of the Exodus from Egypt. We recall the laws of the Passover Seder, the sacred meal eaten on the evening of Passover. We rediscover the laws of the matzah, the bitter herbs, and the Passover offering. We also find the direction that one should tell the story to one's children.

"You will speak to your child on that day saying, for the sake of this did the Lord do this for me in my going out from Egypt (Exodus 13:8)."

Three times in the book of Exodus, the Torah mentions telling the story to one's children.

The idea of telling our children the story is repeated a fourth time in the book of Deuteronomy.

Why does the Torah repeat four times the same law that we should tell our children about the Exodus from Egypt? The answer is the classic teaching of the four children we recite at the Passover Seder: the wise child, the rebellious child, the simple child, and the child who does not know how to ask a question.

There is a profound lesson in the concept of four children who all learn differently. According to Maimonides, "left dato aviv m'lamdo, according to the child's mind, the parent teaches the story." In other words, we ought to tell the story of the Exodus in a way that each child will learn. As the book of Proverbs says, "Teach a son according to his way, and when he is an adult, he will not depart from it (Proverbs 22:6)."

Not only is every child unique, but every human being is different, which is alluded to in an essential teaching from the rabbinic sages. The Mishnah teaches that God is different from a human coin maker. A human uses one stamp to make coins; every coin is identical. Whereas God uses one stamp to make human beings in the image of the Divine, and every one is different. Therefore, all people should say, "The world was created for me." If the world was created for us - that is a statement worth teaching to each generation. Whether they ask the question or not. This is an essential discussion worthy of the Passover Seder and every day.

Be Happy It's Adar! As a frequent performer in the Spiel, I am always thrilled to see so many of you in the audience. The spiel is an opportunity for us to laugh and rejoice together and I know the singers, dancers, actors, writers and everyone associated with the Spiel truly appreciates the support we receive from the congregation. It was truly a wonderful evening. And even as we celebrate Purim, many of us are beginning to think about Passover. It seems that the supermarkets in our area like to prepare for Passover earlier and earlier each year.

Several years ago, I was shopping at the Mariano's here in Northbrook. As I perused the shelves of refrigerated items, I didn't see any horseradish. When I asked an employee where I might find it, he pointed me in the right direction and commented that he been asked about the horseradish's location frequently in the last few days. I suggested that he move the horseradish to be near the cheeses and other refrigerated items for Passover. The next time I was in the store, the horseradish had in fact been moved!

A number of years ago, the New York Times ran an article about Passover, here is an excerpt:

"Passover is appreciated by nearly everyone in the Jewish community and more widely observed than any other holiday. In Israel, more than 90 percent of Jews celebrate Passover; in the United States, 70 percent...

Religious ritual holds power not only because it connects people gathered in one space — it also connects people across time.

For generations Jewish families have gathered for the first night of Passover to recount the 10 plagues from the Book of Exodus — frogs, pestilence, death — and to remember how God delivered the Jewish people from slavery in Egypt thousands of years ago.

Jews observed the Seder in the fifth century B.C. on the Egyptian island of Elephantine, and they observed it in 1943 as German troops liquidated the Warsaw ghetto." Like most of you, I have many memories of seders spent with my grandparents, parents, aunts, uncles and cousins, many who have already passed away. Yet the memories of those past seders greatly influence the seders I have celebrated in more recent years with my children, their spouses, and last year for the very first time I celebrated an in-person seder with my grandson.

And then, barely two weeks after Passover ends, we are celebrating Yom Ha'Atzmaut—Israel's birthday—Wednesday evening, April 26th. I hope that many of you will join us as we celebrate this birthday at BHBE.

Here's hoping you are all happy it's Adar, have seders surrounded by those you love and enjoy a fun celebration of Israel's 75th Birthday!

A few weeks ago, I traveled to Berlin Germany to participate in the annual Louis Lewandowski Choral festival; an international event dedicated to the legacy of the German Jewish composer and his music.

I was accompanied on my trip by members of Kol Zimrah Jewish Community singers, a primer Chicagoland Jewish choir that I have the privilege to conduct.

Our trip was in the making for almost three years. Two times it was delayed due to the COVID related circumstances. But finally, this year we got to go and 42 of us went: 28 singers plus spouses, significant others, and friends.

We spent 6 amazing days in Berlin and Potsdam during which we performed individually and together with other Jewish choirs. We sang, learned from well-known scholars, and toured local sites with some particularly meaningful stops on the way.

Altogether it was a wonderful trip, and we surely did Chicago proud by offering high quality performances for those in attendance to enjoy.

Personally, I was proud to represent BHBE, the community that I serve. Some of our members also participated in the trip and they too enjoyed the experience very much.

So today, I'd like to share some of the highlights of our trip and in doing so, perhaps offer some interesting information about the composer to whose name the festival is dedicated, the music that he wrote, and the way in which his legacy is continued in Germany and throughout Europe.

So, who was Louis Lewandowski and why is there a festival that bears his name?

Lewandowski was a German Jewish composer who lived and worked in Berlin in the middle of the 19th century. Originally from Poland, Lewandowski was the first Jew to be educated in the Prussian Academy of Music in Berlin, a shidduch made by his distant but well connected relative, Felix Mendelsohn Bartoldi.

Since early age Lewandowski showed himself a music prodigy and his talents would later be manifest in his brilliant choral and instrumental arrangements as well as his compositions.

At the time Lewandowski was one of the three giants of synagogue music in Europe. Similar to Samuel Naoumburg in Paris and Solomon Sulzer in Vienna, Lewandowski occupied a prominent place as a well-known cantor, composer and choral conductor in Berlin.

As such, he created specifically German style of the synagogue music; one that incorporated the newly introduced organ and 4-part western style choral harmonies. Lewandowski's arrangements of ancient Hebrew melodies for choir, cantor, and organ were considered masterly productions, characterized by great simplicity and profound religious sentiment. Most of his music Lewandowski created while he was a cantor at the Neue Shul in Berlin, a beautiful synagogue with two golden domes whose remnants still stand in today. Lewandowski died in Berlin 1894. He and his wife Helene are buried in the Weißensee Cemetery. On their gravestone is inscribed: "Liebe macht das Lied unsterblich!" (Love makes the melody immortal!) On the other side of the stone is an inscription in Hebrew that begins with words Kol Rinah Hatfilah "The Voice of Resounding Prayer." This is a reference to the title of Lewandowski's most important music compilation while at the same time a true description of his role as a prominent Jewish liturgical composer.

Lewandowski's music formed the foundation of the German Reform and Conservative liturgy both in Germany and Western Europe. His music also made it to the United States. There, in the beginning of the 20th century it became essential to the American Reform and to the lesser extent Conservative synagogue repertoire.

Today Lewandowski's music is deemed somewhat outdated due to its churchy character and complex arrangement that often require the use of organ and professionally trained choir. At the same time, his music is still used in context, primarily during the High Holidays when it is used to evoke the grandeur of the season.

Here at BHBE we too use Lewandowski's music during the High Holy Days and on Shabbat. Some of the most recognizable Lewandowski's tunes from the HH Days include Adonai Adonai, Unetane Tokef Kedushat Hayom, Ut'shuva Ut'filah Utzedakah, those from Shabbat liturgy include: V'zot Hatorah Ahher Som Moshe...., Hodo Al Eretz Veshamayim....

Kedusha Responses, S'ushearim Rashechem...to name a few.

You can tell from the musical examples that I've given that Lewandowski's music is still assigned to some of the most important elements of our liturgy. This surely is a testament to the composer's genius and the long-lasting value of his creative art.

That aside, and as I have mentioned earlier, the practical application of Lewandowski's liturgical music in the United States has declined. Yet the Europeans and in particular the Germans kept it going. To celebrate Lewandowsky's music as a national legacy, an annual festival was established in Berlin in 2011.

Every year, the festival features Jewish choirs from around the world including "The Synagogal Ensemble of Berlin", the resident choir at the Pestalozzistraße Synagogue that presents full Lewandowski Shabbat service every Friday night.

This choir is directed by a wonderful choral conductor and organist Regina Yantian who really is at the heart of the festival as its inspirer, organizer, and librarian for many of Lewandowski's compositions.

I met Regina a number of years ago through my German connections. She and i always wanted to bring Kol Zimrah to Berlin and this year it finally became a reality. With Regina's help we were invited to sing at this year's choral festival entitled "Viva Italia form Rossi to Rossini."

The Italian theme of the festival was inspired by musicological research conducted by the Berkley-based Italian born Jewish scholar Francesco Spagnolo.

A brilliant scholar and wonderful speaker, Francesco curated the Italian content of the festival. He also delivered a center piece lecture on diversity of music in Italian ghetto; a truly fascinating topic that provided enough material to be a sermon of its own. And that is why I am only mentioning it here briefly.

Franceso's discovery and research provided the theme for the festival and the repertoire for each choir to present.

There were three other Jewish choirs in addition to KZ that came to the festival to perform: Coro Ha-Kol from Rom, Italy, conducted by young but brilliant Alberto Di Sanctis, Adi Classical Young Choir from Israel, led by the Jerusalem Opera choir conductor Oded Shomrony, and the Synagogal Ensemble Berlin conducted by Regina Yantian.

Each choir presented a program of their own; one that featured their own repertoire together with Italian Jewish music and that of Louis Lewandowski. The performances were scheduled in different spaces in Berlin and Potsdam with a final concert at the beautiful Ryjestrasse Synagogue.

Our first performance took place during the joint concert at the Nikolaichirche in Potsdam. We genuinely enjoyed the acoustics of the place as the sounds of our voices penetrated the darkest corners of the building and made it ring with joy.

Our second performance entitled Chicago Goes Berlin was scheduled at the historic New Synagogue otherwise known as the Centrum Judaicum in Berlin. The synagogue, or what has remained of it, was built in the 19th century to accommodate the growing Jewish population of Berlin. It was called new because it replaced the old building which at the time was too small.

After it was built, the synagogue featured a large 3000 seats sanctuary and a beautiful domed façade. Many prominent musicians performed there and for a while the building was a gem of the Jewish presence in pre-war Berlin.

During the Kristallnacht, the building suffered though fire though not destroyed due to the heroic efforts of Otto Bellgardt the German police officer, who scared away the looters and allowed for the fire brigand to enter in. The building was not significantly damaged during the war either. It proudly stood until 1958 when it was demolished for the lack of financial funding in the absence of the robust local Jewish community. In 1989, after the fall of the Berlin war the restoration of the building, which was located in the former East Berlin began. However only the façade and the domes were restored, and the former sanctuary remained an open field as a memorial to what was once there. Today the Neue Synagogue houses a small Conservative minyan and a meaningful museum that was created to educate the visitors about the synagogue and the German Jewish past.

For us it was an especially prominent place to be and to offer our music to those who came to see us. That day, the attendance exceeded the expectations. We were greeted warmly by the audiences who deeply appreciated the All-American program that we had presented. The choir did a superb job performing and i was truly proud to represent Chicago and the United States while singing in the building that had so many meaningful memories to cherish and to behold.

The next day, Friday, we went to services at the Rykestrasse synagogue. There we were joined by other choirs and members of the congregation as we welcomed Shabbat together with music written by Louis Lewandowski. I had the opportunity to sing from the century -old bima, a place from where the cantors of the past led their congregations in prayer. To be in that historic synagogue and to sing Lewandowski's music in the place where he once stood was truly a memorable experience.

The Shabbat services were fantastic. And so were the concerts that we gave in Potsdam and Berlin during the week. But nothing was more amazing than our final performance at Rykestrasse on Sunday afternoon.

This final performance was attended by many people and staged as a true choral theater masterpiece. The sounds, the colors, the audience, and the overall ambiance of the place were truly unforgettable. It was pretty clear to everyone who performed there that night that this was once in a lifetime event that would remain in our collective memory forever.

After the concert, we were invited to share a meal with members of other choirs and guests. In a small but meaningful ceremony Kol Zimrah was warmly welcomed into the festival by its organizers including Mr. Nils Peters Busch, the festival's main sponsor and curator.

We also had the opportunity to meet new friends from all over the world and it was amazing to be there and to listen to all the different languages spoken in the foyer. The evening ended with the Chanukah sing a long lead by the Israeli ADI choir and picked up by all those in attendance. It was truly a grand finale for an amazing event that we were privileged to attend.

And then there were of course other meetings and tours both organized and spontaneous; those that took place before and after the festival and during our time in Berlin. We toured a number of the shoa related sites and visited the remnants of the famous Berlin wall. We also went to the Wesensee Cemetery where we stopped by Louis Lewandowski's final resting place.

There we recited a prayer in memory of the composer and all those who perished in the shoa. Led by Hazzan Joseph Malovany, the prayer, El Maleh Rachamim, truly penetrated the hearts.

Hearing it also made us realize how important it was for us to be there; singing and celebrating Jewish musical legacy in the place where the Nazis plotted to do destroy it.

They did not succeed. And the testament to that was our mighty choir of Jews from all over the world, standing proudly on the German soil and singing in Hebrew together. What a meaningful experience it was to behold and to remember.

And this very memory is something that I want to end my remarks with today. I think that in many ways it really summarizes the very reason for festival to exist and for us to have traveled there to celebrate the composer's legacy and his music.

Yes, we went to Germany to share our music and to learn. We've accomplished both of these goals and i am very proud of what we have learned and accomplished. At the same time, by traveling to Berlin and by singing there we made a statement.

"We are here" we proclaimed with our voices and our songs. We are here to uphold the legacy of Lewandowski and those like him, cantors, and composers of Europe throughout the generations. And until our voices are heard so will be the sounds of Kol Rinah Hatfilah the beautiful music tradition of the European Jews. Shabbat Shalom!

I want to give a shout of thanks to all of you who have stepped up and helped to make our kiddush self-sustaining. It is a wonderful thing to have people come up to me on Shabbat and ask if they can enhance or sponsor a kiddush in honor of a personal special occasion. Our numbers are increasing on Shabbat and it's so nice to see everyone at services and at kiddush. Sometimes we have an anonymous donor who just wants us all to have good kiddush food with protein which is so very thoughtful. We really appreciate his generosity. Sometimes people want to honor someone else like our growing tot/littles program. Our once a month birthday kiddush is growing too where you can enhance your birthday or your friend's birthday during Birthday kiddush. Thank you to Adam Goldfarb for initiating this program. You can sign up for that online and your names will be in our Shabbat handout.

I want to tell you about two other funds we have that got started just as covid was shutting us down. We wanted to honor our centurions Max Tannenbaum and Howard Greene. That fact in itself is amazing and the fact that we have two people in this category is jaw dropping. Howard has a fund for Morning Minyan. Our regulars get a light breakfast when they come to daven. Often if you have a yahrzeit, the family provides breakfast for the group. This is ongoing. Please consider making a contribution to this fund. Max Tannenbaum's fund was to enhance the L'chaim table. Their singing is robust and that bottle of schnapps helps tremendously. Please consider making a donation to this fund too.

We want kiddush to be the place you go after services. Your happy place. The place you get to hang out with your friends. Thank you again for supporting our self-sustaining kiddush at BHBE.

L'chaim, Marsha Lyons Mitzvah Coordinator Each January, the Association of Jewish Libraries announces the winners of the Jewish Fiction Award and the Sydney Taylor Book Award (for the best Jewish children's literature). Also announced in January are the National Jewish Book Awards and the Sophie Brody Award (given by the American Library Association to encourage, recognize and commend outstanding achievement in Jewish literature). Here are a few of the recent winners of these awards:

The Man Who Sold Air in the Holy Land by Omer Friedlander (AJL Fiction Award)

Warm, poignant, delightfully whimsical, Omer Friedlander's gorgeously immersive and imaginative stories take you to the narrow limestone alleyways of Jerusalem, the desolate beauty of the Negev Desert, and the sprawling orange groves of Jaffa, with characters that spring to vivid life. A divorced con artist and his daughter sell empty bottles of "holy air" to credulous tourists; a Lebanese Scheherazade enchants three young soldiers in a bombed-out Beirut radio station; a boy daringly "rooftops" at night, climbing steel cranes in scuffed sneakers even as he reimagines the bravery of a Polish-Jewish dancer during the Holocaust; an Israeli volunteer at a West Bank checkpoint mourns the death of her son, a soldier killed in Gaza. These stories render the intimate lives of people striving for connection. They are fairy tales turned on their head by the stakes of real life, where moments of fragile intimacy mix with comedy and notes of the absurd. Told in prose of astonishing vividness that also demonstrates remarkable control and restraint, they have a universal appeal to the heart. (from the publisher)

One Hundred Saturdays: Stella Levi and the Search for a Lost World by Michael Frank (Sophie Brody Medal Winner and National Jewish Book Award for Holocaust Memoir and Sephardic Culture)

With nearly a century of life behind her, Stella Levi had never before spoken in detail about her past. Then she met Michael Frank. He came to her Greenwich Village apartment one Saturday afternoon to ask her a question about the Juderia, the neighborhood on the Greek island of Rhodes where she'd grown up in a Jewish community that had thrived there for half a millennium. Neither of them could know this was the first of one hundred Saturdays over the course of six years that they would spend in each other's company. During these meetings Stella traveled back in time to conjure what it felt like to come of age on this luminous, legendary island in the eastern Aegean, which the Italians conquered in 1912, began governing as an official colonial possession in 1923, and continued to administer even after the Germans seized control in September 1943. The following July, the Germans rounded up all 1,700-plus residents of the Juderia and sent them first by boat and then by train to Auschwitz on what was the longest journey—measured by both time and distance-of any of the deportations. Ninety percent of them were murdered upon arrival. Probing and courageous, candid and sly, Stella is a magical modern-day Scheherazade whose stories reveal what it was like to grow up in an extraordinary place in an extraordinary time-and to construct a life after that place has vanished. One Hundred Saturdays is a portrait of one of the last survivors drawn at nearly the last possible moment, as well as an account of a tender and transformative friendship between storyteller and listener, offering a powerful "reminder that the ability to listen thoughtfully is a rare and significant gift." (from the publisher and The Wall Street Journal)

The Very Best Sukkah: A Story from Uganda by Shoshana Nambi, illustrated by Moran Yogev (STBA Honors, Picture Book Category, and National Jewish Book Award, Children's Pic-ture Book)

Sukkot is Shoshi's favorite Jewish holiday. She and her brothers love to decorate their sukkah, the hut where her family will celebrate. But who will win the Ugandan Abayudaya community's annual sukkah contest? While only one sukkah can be the best, everybody wins when neighbors work together. (from the publisher) "In this heart-warming story, kids are introduced to the customs and traditions of the Abayudaya Author Nambi, who grew up in the Abayudaya community and is now a rabbinical student in the U.S., deserves high praise for broadening the global lens of what it means and looks like to be Jewish." (Jewish Journal)

Ellen Outside the Lines by A. J. Sass (STBA Honors, Middle Grade Category)

Thirteen-year-old Ellen Katz feels most comfortable when her life is well planned out and people fit neatly into her predefined categories. She attends temple with Abba and Mom every Friday and Saturday. Ellen only gets crushes on girls, never boys, and she knows she can always rely on her best-and-only friend, Laurel, to help navigate social situations at their private Georgia middle school. Laurel has always made Ellen feel like being autistic is no big deal. But lately, Laurel has started making more friends, and cancelling more weekend plans with Ellen than she keeps. A school trip to Barcelona seems like the perfect place for Ellen to get their friendship back on track. Except it doesn't. Toss in a new nonbinary classmate whose identity has Ellen questioning her very binary way of seeing the world, homesickness, a scavenger hunt-style team project that takes the students through Barcelona to learn about Spanish culture and this trip is anything but what Ellen planned. Making new friends and letting go of old ones is never easy, but Ellen might just find a comfortable new place for herself if she can learn to embrace the fact that life doesn't always stick to a planned itinerary. (from the publisher) "A tender, sweet coming-of-age story that brilliantly includes Ellen's autism, LGBTQ+ identity, and Judaism in an engaging, fun scavenger-hunt plot that explores what happens when we take things one day at a time." Charity Begins at Home...Continues...

A disabled congregant with mobility issues was seeking assistance with a few tasks around her home. In the last few months Harold Primack and Steven Bucksbaum have partnered to take out the garbage and the recycling. One time, Steven's nephew Zack Brody, visiting from Nashville assisted. A special thank you to Ivan Cramer and Clancy Fine, who restarted the pilot light in the congregant's water heater. With the re-lit pilot light, hot water was flowing again.

This has been a multi-visit task and it will continue to be a service opportunity. We have had to return several times to take out the garbage and the recycling. We would gratefully accept more volunteers, "many hands make little work". Please contact Steven Bucksbaum or Harold Primack if you would like to participate.

January Food for Thought Breakfast

Jeff Roth invited Dr. Ruth Behar to speak to us via Zoom from her office at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, MI. Dr. Behar spoke on her book "Letters from Cuba" about growing up in Cuba before the revolution. Dr. Behar told stories of how her family came to Cuba in the mid-1930's and worked to start a new life. She showed photos of the family as they grew up in Havana including the lace store that her family ran. Photos gave context to the stories. For a presentation on Zoom, there was good attendance. About 20 people logged into the Zoom call and participated in the presentation and the conversation that followed. Special thanks to Stewart Miller for producing the breakfast flier.
